Sex: Male

Weight: 15 lbs

MEET NOODLES...who is ready, willing and able to meet you! This precocious 1.5-2 yr old, 15 lb, cream colored Lhasa Bichon baby boy was found wandering the streets (intact) until a wonderful good Samaritan saved him from traffic and who knows what else! After exhausting a search for his people and having no luck, they called Lhasa Happy Homes and asked for our help. We obliged and we are thrilled that we did. Now neutered, up to date on his shots, microchipped and groomed, this little "noodle" is a happy boy who just wants to love and be loved! When he first greets people coming into your house...or meeting you on the street...he may bark and tell you right up front who is the boss!! But only for a minute, as soon as once he knows you are safe, he is a gentleman and kisses other dogs and lets them know he is a friend! Foster says he needs more training on the leash, as he gets too excited when he sees others and needs to know the ropes!

Noodles loves everyone! He is good with kids (over the age of 5), dogs, we don't know about cats...young and old, men and women, he wants to be your friend. He especially would like to have his very own canine companion to fun around with because while he doesn't have separation anxiety, he doesn't like being alone and he loves engaging. He LOVES bones and will spread them around the house when he's not playing with them! Loves squeaky toys and loves being a puppy. Don't leave tissue around or one piece will become many!

Noodles will bark for a minute or two when you leave, and does the cutest dance and pattycakes when you come home! Because of this, he would be best in a home as opposed to an apartment or townhouse. He is a kissyface boy, and he will join you on your bed for a quick cuddle, then he prefers the floor or his own bed! Everyone should have a dog like Noodles one time in their life!! Does Noodles sound like a delicious morsel for you to love?
